

Biography

Molly Schulps grew up in Los Angeles, CA with parents who encouraged her to explore and practice art. Her father, John Schulps was a successful production potter and well respected in the field. Molly has primarily worked with ceramics since 1995, although she also uses many other materials such as paint, wood, wax, wire, etc. Schulps earned her Master's of Fine Arts, with distinction, from California State University, Northridge in 2001. Molly has been the head of the Ceramics Program at Cypress College since 2004, before that she taught at various colleges and universities throughout Southern California. She has exhibited her ceramic work nationally and has facilitated and presented at several ceramic workshops. Recently, Molly has made the move to the historic town of Astoria, Oregon.
